Press Release: National Payment Announces Extended Hours for Paperless Payroll Customers

Tampa, FL (February 21, 2008) – In order to accommodate a thriving West Coast customer base as well as provide valuable processing time to customers in all time zones, National Payment recently adopted a new operating schedule that gives payroll administrators more time to process their payroll.

Leading independent direct deposit provider National Payment Corporation is in a West Coast state of mind. In order to accommodate a thriving West Coast customer base as well as provide valuable processing time to customers in all time zones, National Payment recently adopted a new operating schedule that gives payroll administrators more time to process their payroll.

"We've considered extending our hours for some time now as a convenience to our customers. Now, instead of having a processing cutoff time of 3:00 p.m., they can upload electronic payroll files until 7:50 p.m. EST. They'll also have extended access to customer support and technical support. We've gotten great feedback from our customers on the new schedule, especially from our friends on the West Coast – they're very excited about the change," explains Steven F. Pereira, National Payment Corporation's Vice President and General Manager.

Established in 1991, National Payment is one of the nation's largest independent direct deposit providers. The firm also provides paperless pay stubs, paycards for employees without bank accounts, and electronic invoicing. By utilizing 100% web-based methodologies, National Payment's wireless payroll distribution services save employers time and money by eliminating tedious printing and envelope-stuffing processes.

Many organizations have already made the switch to direct deposit and paperless pay stubs, but some still struggle to meet payroll submission deadlines. By extending their operating hours, National Payment expects to penetrate a larger segment of the payroll processing market. The new schedule also provides a critical advantage over traditional banking-based direct deposit models that force customers to adapt to standard banking hours, thereby failing to address the need for after-hours assistance.

"A lot of our customers are being asked to do more with less staff and fewer resources. They're incredibly overworked, and they're under a lot of stress. We simply want to help them by giving them more time to get their work done. And we want them to know that we'll be here if they need us," says Pereira.
